

Coffee Table Style

September is the perfect time to refresh the interior of your home! A coffee table is typically the focal point of the living area. It is a great place to kick your feet up and relax. Your coffee table can also be a conversation piece when you have guests present. Here are some great pieces that will help give your table area a fresh look as we go into a new season.

As a rule, make sure you include three different levels of objects: small, medium, and tall in order to keep interest and balance the area.

To add height to your coffee table, think about adding a vase with either faux or real florals! I think all white flowers always look fresh for any space.

Florals and vases available via The Flower Room

I love including personal mementos in my interior decorating. Choose one of your favorite family photos and place it in a beautiful frame.

Picture Frames available via Change of Space

A candle can serve a dual purpose to give off an inviting scent throughout your space as well as adding color and textural interest to your coffee table.

LAFCO has some of my favorite scents! These candles look beautiful and burn well to make your home smell amazing.

Available for $46 via J Brown for the Home

A coffee table book is one of my favorite ways to draw interest to the area. There are so many great ones out there, but I specifically love this line of books that highlight different places throughout the world. The colors and designs are always so beautiful! Stack a few together for a layered look.

Available for $95 via MerchantHouse

Place most or even all of your items on your coffee table on a tray. I love a silver mirrored one to add dimension to your space.

Available for $59 via Target

An estate sale or flea market is a great place to grab eye-catching items and give them a new life in your own space!